An intensive, week-long course for physicians, medical trainees, public health practitioners, nurses and other healthcare workers who intend to practice in the tropics, resource-limited settings or who require an update on infectious, parasitic and other major tropical diseases.

PURPOSE

To train health professionals to learn an approach to preventing, diagnosing, evaluating, treating and managing tropical diseases.

COURSE OBJECTIVES

Through interactive lectures, small-group case-based discussions and practical laboratory teaching, attendees will learn:

- A clinical approach to the evaluation and management of tropical diseases;
- Practical laboratory skills, with a focus on the identification of parasites important for the diagnosis of tropical diseases;
- Public health principles and applications including outbreak management.

Each of these areas has specific learning outcomes for course participants. See course website for more information.

“Excellent review of disease treatments and overview. Outstanding speakers. They have great credibility because they went to parts of the world where diseases were located. Very glad I came and have greatly benefited.”
— 2018 course participant

“The presentations were extremely informative regarding the various illnesses seen within tropical geographic medicine. Provided plenty of great info for reference when needed in practice.”
— 2017 course participant

“All lecturers were incredibly passionate about the topics they presented and were good communicators. Usually at conferences I find the presentations of mixed quality but lectures at this course were high yield and presented well. Small groups were great for problem solving as they cemented learning objectives.”
